Union Course Design/Redesign Institute provides faculty with the time, space and tools to design or redesign their course based on an overall course goal and learning objectives that enhance student learning.

Day One, Thursday, May 16th: Designing a course based on a course goal that begins with the end in mind.

Welcome and Introduction (Nan Thomas)

Participants share how their teaching has developed throughout their vocational journey thus far.

Learning that Lasts at Union University: (Ann Singleton)

Creating Course goals

Peer discussion of course goals

Day Two, Friday, May 17th: Develop learning objectives to fulfill the overall course goal.

Creating Learning Objectives that Support Course Goals

Fink and Bloom

Peer discussion of goals and objectives

Refine goals and objectives

Consider assessment and design assignments to fulfill the course learning objectives.

Summative and Formative Assessment

Tyler Assessment Triangle

Peer review of course goal, learning objectives

Organize content, consider assessment and plan assignments: Make discipline specific decisions regarding which content to include in a course and organize that content. Evaluate which pedagogical tools and teaching styles will be most appropriate for the context, goals, and learning objectives of an individual course.
