Backdrop of Remembrance

The backdrop design at Union's Ninth Annual Scholarship Banquet was patterned after a service flag displayed on campus during World War II. A white star was sewn onto the flag every time someone left the University to serve in the war. Yellow stars were added for Unionites who gave the ultimate sacrifice. One account states there were as many as 425 stars on the flag at one time. At war's end, 11 of the stars were yellow.

A decade
of transformational
Leadership

Where did the time go?

It seems impossible. Could it be that we have been involved with Union for a decade? Where did the time go?

On December 8 of this year Lanese and I will celebrate the tenth anniversary of our election to serve as President and First Lady of Union University. What a special privilege it is to serve this great institution. Over these years I have had the privilege to learn the history and heritage of this special place. Now we have the responsibility to carry on the tradition of R.B.C. Howell, Joseph Eaton, Charles Manley, George Savage, Henry Watters, John J. Hurt, Warren Jones, Robert Craig, Hyran Barefoot and so many others who have shaped this University we love.

While this issue reflects on the work of Union over the past decade, it does not tell the full story of the hundreds of people who have made this University what it has become. The story includes the wonderful staff members who serve across the campus. They are the unseen heroes of the University. The story includes a marvelously gifted faculty—a group of great teachers and brilliant thinkers who impact the lives of students day after day. The story includes administrative colleagues who carry such a heavy responsibility and give so much of themselves for this University. The story includes a magnificent Board of Trustees, helpful advisory boards and councils, supportive alumni, encouraging community leaders and godly church leaders. All of these contribute to the life of Union in exceptional ways. The commitment to excellence represented among all of these people will make an ongoing difference in advancing the work of Union University for many years to come. In this issue you will find the names of several thousand donors whose gifts have a transformational effect. We certainly give thanks for each of them. Of course all of these do what they do for the good of Union students. During this decade approximately 6,000 students will have been graduated from Union University—incredibly well-prepared for the next step of life's journey. Each of them represents a special story within the larger University story.

Each and every day, like a conductor in the front of a symphony, I have the amazing privilege of seeing all of these parts blend together to produce beautiful music in a way that seeks to honor our great God and serve this special institution. Sometimes when we observe these efforts and activities on a daily basis we run the risk of missing the big picture of all that happens each week, each month, each year, and now each decade. This issue of the Unionite allows us to stop, step back, and take a long look at the past year and the past decade. I know you will join me in saying thanks be to God for His amazing and gracious blessings to Union University.

At a time like this I want to say a huge Thank You to so many, particularly those who provide encouragement and strength for our service each day. The hours click by each day and the days become weeks, the weeks become months, the months become years—and now, an entire decade! What a joy it has been. It has been ten blessed years, but the best years for Union are still in front of us. The Union 2010 Plan charts a bold, exciting, and far reaching course for our future. I am sure these next years will pass by ever so quickly as well. Times like this cause us to pause and reflect, and to offer the prayer of the Psalmist as he asks for God's help, guidance, and direction:

Teach us to number our days that we (also) may present to you a heart of wisdom (Psalm 90:12).

Soli Deo Gloria

About the cover

David S. Dockery has served the Union community for nearly 10 years. Colleagues say that time frame represents one of the most dynamic growth phases in the school's 182-year history. On pages 12-23, you can read more about how David and Lanese Dockery have become much more than President and First Lady to Union students, faculty and staff.

Rankings honor Union University

U.S. News & World Report has named Union University a top-tier southern university for the ninth consecutive year.

Union ranked 38th in the "Southern Universities-Master's: Top Schools" category, which includes those institutions that provide a full range of undergraduate programs and some master's level programs. Among the top tier universities in the South, Union ranked in the top 10 in three subcategories:

Union tied for fourth place overall in the "Student/faculty ratio" category, with a ratio of 12 to 1, which placed it in the top 20 southern universities in that category.

Union was seventh in the "Faculty resources" category, which measures such components as the number of classes with fewer than 20 students, faculty salary and the proportion of professors with the highest degree in their fields.

Union tied for seventh in the "Freshmen in top 25 percent of high school class" ranking, with 63 percent of its freshmen meeting that description.

In a fourth subcategory — "Selectivity rank," which measures such areas as test scores and class rank for incoming students — Union ranked 16th.

"To be recognized by U.S. News & World Report as a top tier university in the South for the ninth straight year is an incredible testimony to the excellence that characterizes a Union University education," Union University President David S. Dockery said. "The 2006 rankings once again point to the wonderful quality of the Union faculty, staff and student body, and I salute them for their achievement."

Record graduate total tops 900

More than 250 Union University students received degrees Saturday, Aug. 8, as part of Union's summer graduation ceremony at West Jackson Baptist Church. The 254 graduates bring Union's total number of graduates for the 2004-2005 academic year to 918, the highest

Ninth Annual Scholarship Banquet features wit and wisdom of Bob Dole

Peppering his comments with self-deprecating humor, Bob Dole told those attending Union University's Ninth Annual Scholarship Banquet that patience and endurance are two keys to overcoming life's obstacles.

The Sept. 27 event, held at Jackson's Carl Perkins Civic Center, raised nearly $500,000 for student scholarships.

"It was another remarkable evening," Union University President David S. Dockery said. "Senator Dole was humorous and engaging. Our guests enjoyed themselves. But most importantly, the students of the university will be the recipients of the generous gifts from our friends — gifts which will ensure that a quality Union education can and will remain affordable and accessible."

Dole talked about his experience during World War II, when he suffered near-fatal injuries while leading his platoon up an Italian hill. His rehabilitation was lengthy and arduous, but Dole said through it he became a better person.

"In a sense, my whole life before April 14, 1945, was a prologue to the story, just as my life ever since has been shaped by what happened that April morning on an Italian hillside," Dole said. "I finally realized it was time for me to grow up, forget about what I'd lost and realize what I still had."

No longer able to depend on his hands and body, Dole had to rely on his head and his heart. He ascended through the political ranks and served his home state of Kansas in the U.S. Senate for nearly 30 years. His presidential campaign in 1996 wasn't as successful as his Senate races.

"I ran for president in '96, and the word's out now, I lost," Dole told the crowd. Dole said U.S. veterans and those currently serving in the armed forces appreciate five words more than anything else: "Thank you for your service."

He used Dwight Eisenhower as an example of what true leadership means. Prior to the D-Day invasion of Europe in 1944, Eisenhower crafted a statement if the operation hadn't succeeded:

"Our landing has failed and I have withdrawn the troops," Eisenhower wrote. "My decision to attack at this time and place was based upon the best information available. The troops, the air and the navy did all that bravery and devotion to duty could do. If any blame or fault attaches to the attempt, it is mine alone."

That last line is a definition of leadership in one sentence, Dole said.

Throughout his hour-long address, Dole interjected his humor several times. One of his projects was to compile a book of presidential humor, going all the way back to George Washington.

"I did not know George Washington," Dole said. "But Sen. (Strom) Thurmond knew George Washington. He was a lot of help to us in the book. He'd been an intern for Jefferson and met Washington."

On another occasion, he addressed the likelihood of a woman becoming president.

"There will be a woman president one of these days," he said. "I hope not too soon."

Union students said Dole was an entertaining speaker.

"I like the speakers who come in here with a lot of enthusiasm and a lot of excitement and bring a new perspective in on politics," junior Shanna Hawkins said. "They make it more lively for those of us who aren't as interested in politics.

It makes it more interesting and makes you want to get involved and learn more."

Senior Brad Spencer, president of Union's Student Government Association, gave the invocation prior to Dole's address.

"It was definitely a real honor to share the stage with Senator Dole," Spencer said. "He had such an impact on American politics for three decades."

Spencer also expressed his appreciation to the event's sponsors and those who attended, people who are responsible for the scholarship money that has helped students like him.

"It was very humbling to get up there and lead the invocation in front of so many influential people, and people who have had such an influence in my life — even though I don't know them — through scholarships," he said.

Previous keynote speakers for the Scholarship Banquet were George H. W. Bush, Margaret Thatcher, Mikhail Gorbachev, Rudy Giuliani, John Major, Colin Powell, James Baker and Lou Holtz.

Union Forum '06 to feature examination of judicial politics

The eighth annual Union Forum will feature a discussion of judicial politics and the future of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Law Professor Robert George of Princeton University will address the first forum Thursday, March 16, 2006. Time magazine columnist Margaret Carlson is scheduled for the second forum April 6.

George is a member of the President's Council on Bioethics and formerly served as a presidential appointee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. He has authored numerous books, scholarly articles and book reviews.

Carlson is the first woman columnist in Time magazine's 76-year history. She has also been the magazine's deputy Washington bureau chief and White House correspondent. Carlson makes frequent appearances on national television programs such as CNN's "Inside Politics." She was a regular on that network's "The Capital Gang" during the show's lengthy run.

Union Forum luncheons in 2005 drew record crowds, and early reservations are advised for 2006. Table sponsorships cost $100 for each event, or $175 for both dates. Individual seats are also available. For more information, call the Office of University Relations at 661-5050.

total ever for the university.

"This special ceremony was a fitting conclusion to a record-breaking year," Union University President David S. Dockery said.

He told the graduates, "We pray that today's recognition will encourage you toward a lifetime of service and achievement."

Most of the graduates were from the College of Education and Human Studies, with master's degrees in education or education specialist degrees. In addition, 22 students received their doctor of education degrees.

Carolyn Bishop, president and international director of the Consortium for Global Education in Marietta, Ga., brought the commencement address. Bishop encouraged graduates to be willing to compete globally, but to temper such competition with a spirit of cooperation.

"Our world will not survive with countries crossing the finish line one by one," Bishop said. "We must finish as nations together."

Union fall enrollment a record

Despite a record number of graduates during the 2004-2005 academic year, Union University still set a new enrollment record this fall.

Fall enrollment is 2,981 students, up from last year's fall enrollment of 2,919. This year's total also includes a record number of 907 new students, compared to just more than 800 first-time students last year.

"We are thrilled with the record fall enrollment," Union University President David S. Dockery said. "It is the eighth straight year that Union has seen an increase in overall enrollment and we are thankful for God's continuing blessings to this university. Moreover, we are thankful for every student represented by these numbers and trust that their time at Union will prepare them well for the next step in their journeys."

The enrollment totals include more than 600 new undergraduates, both freshmen and transfers, and almost 300 new graduate students.

Perfect SAT score surprises Union freshman

In many ways, Josh Hays is a typical teenager.

He likes to spend time with his family and friends. He loves water sports and music, and he leads worship for his church's youth group at Northside Baptist Church in Murfreesboro, Tenn.

But not every teenager gets a perfect score on the SAT. Hays did.

"I knew that I had done well," Hays said. "I had taken the ACT before and got a 35 on it, so I knew I was going to have a strong score. But no, a perfect score is not what I was thinking coming out of there."

Hays is the first Union University student with a perfect SAT score. He could have gone to college anywhere in the country, but he chose Union.

In fact, Union was the only place he sent his SAT scores.

Hays said he wanted a college that was serious about Christianity, but also serious about learning in general. Some schools like Harvard and Yale are great institutions of learning, he said, but are lacking when it comes to a Christian atmosphere. Other Christian colleges have that going for them, but are lacking academically.

"I've felt for a while now that I'm called to some type of Christian ministry," Hays said. "I don't know the specifics of that — pastor, youth pastor, Christian teaching. It could go a lot of different ways. But I definitely want to do something as a full-time Christian vocation."

"As I looked at all the schools, Union just really seemed to have the best program, the most to offer, as far as that field," he continued. "For what I wanted to do, Union seemed the best."

A recipient of a Presidential Scholarship at Union that covers all tuition and housing costs for four years, Hays acknowledges God's hand in his achievements, including his SAT score.

"It truly is something from God," Hays said. "It's not something that I've done. It's just a blessing and it's something God has put there for me to open doors." ❖

Honored Graduates

Union graduates excel at UT Health Science Center

When the University of Tennessee Health Science Center conducted its spring graduation in Memphis, Union graduates were among those receiving top academic honors.

In the College of Medicine, Catherine Patricia Scarbrough ('00) won the Outstanding Student in Family Practice Award, selected by the Tennessee Academy of Family Physicians.

Misty Yow Allen ('99) and Stephanie Mabry Perkins ('01) were each recognized as members of Alpha Omega Alpha, the National Honor Medical Society whose membership is based entirely upon scholarship, personal honesty and potential leadership.

Allen also received the Family Medicine departmental award, and Perkins won the Alumni Achievement Award in Research Medicine, given to a graduating senior in recognition of outstanding achievement in biomedical research.

In addition, Allen graduated with highest honors and Perkins graduated with high honors.

"Each of these young people has in their own way continued the tradition of excellence as they render Christian service to those needing the healing arts," said Union University chemistry professor Charles Baldwin, who taught all the students as undergraduates. "They bring a measure of hope to the future as they continue to demonstrate the core values that Union University seeks to instill in its graduates. I would happily place my life, or that of my family members, in the hands of these young health professionals."

In the College of Pharmacy, Sara Robertson Vazquez ('01) received the Pharmacy Administration Award, given to the student with the highest general average in all pharmacy administration courses.

Melissa Sei-Gnah Yau ('01) received the Pharmaceutics Award, given to the student with a high scholastic average in the department of pharmaceutics and who is judged by the department faculty to have exhibited outstanding professional characteristics. Jonathan Marshall Hoover ('01) was given the Glaxo Smith Kline Patient Care Award, based on a variety of criteria including outstanding performance in community or hospital practice, communication skills and patient counseling, among others.

Vazquez, Yau and John Thomas Guthrie II ('01) were recognized as members of the Rho Chi Honor Society, with membership based on high attainment in scholarship, character, personality and leadership.

Vazquez was also recognized as a member of the Phi Lambda Sigma Leadership Society, whose goal is to identify individuals who are outstanding leaders in the pharmacy profession.

Vazquez and Yau graduated from the College of Pharmacy with high honors, while Hoover graduated with honors.

Other Union alumni who graduated from the University of Tennessee's Health Science Center this year were Jeffery Jones ('00), Brent Morris ('01), Kenneth Barker ('00), Bethany Lang Morgan Guerra ('02) and Sherri Hamilton ('01). ❖

Accrediting bodies have approved or reaffirmed three programs at Union University during the fall semester.

The Council on Accreditation of Nurse Anesthesia Educational Programs (COA), the official nurse anesthetist accrediting agency has given full approval to Union's Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetist program, clearing the way for students to begin study in January.

In addition, the Council on Social Work Education has reaffirmed the university's social work program, and the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education has reaffirmed Union's teacher education program.

Tim Smith, dean of Union's School of Nursing, said the CRNA program will be the first such program among the 176 universities in the Council for Christian Colleges and Universities.

Twenty-six applicants have already been approved for the program, which will become the fifth one in the state of Tennessee. Smith said Union's program, however, would be unique for the integration of Christian values into the instruction.

"Our difference is that we have a program for the purpose of teaching the Christian worldview in the profession of nurse anesthesia," Smith said. "That's what we're going to be about."

Union's CRNA program will work with 13 regional hospitals. West Tennessee Healthcare has pledged $3 million to Union — $500,000 for construction of White Hall and $2.5 million for the CRNA program, personnel and space needs.

"The establishment and launch of the CRNA program at Union University is one of the most exciting endeavors in the history of this university," Union President David S. Dockery said. "Union has been blessed by great friends in the healthcare community since the establishment of the nursing program at Union 40 years ago, chief among these friends being West Tennessee Healthcare."

Union University Provost Carla Sanderson said the approval is evidence of Union's commitment to excellence in accreditation.

"This accreditation for Union's new CRNA program comes as a result of two things — an amazing new team of bright, forward-thinking faculty, including our dean, and a 40-year-old School of Nursing filled with faculty who advance the nursing profession through their outstanding teaching and service," Sanderson said.

The 31-month program will result in a Master of Science degree in nursing. Students will spend the first eight months in the classroom, followed by nearly two years in a clinical setting, where they will perform 1,200 procedures.

The first CRNA class at Union will graduate in August 2008.

"Union has had great nursing faculty and leadership, and wonderful nursing students — all who have paved the way for this moment in the life of the institution," Dockery said. "I am thankful for the generous support of the healthcare community and the leadership of Tim Smith and the nursing school faculty who have brought us to this point."

In addition to the CRNA, social work and teacher education programs, the engineering program at Union is in accreditation approval process from the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology. ABET representatives conducted a site visit to Union's campus in early October, and a decision whether to approve Union's engineering program could come next summer. ❖

Fowler appointed IMB trustee

Charles Fowler, senior vice president for university relations at Union University, has begun his first term as trustee of the Southern Baptist Convention's International Mission Board in Richmond, Va.

Fowler was elected to the board during the SBC's annual meeting in June. He fills the seat vacated by John Adams, retired vice president for religious affairs at Union, who rotated off the board after serving two terms over the last eight years.

Fowler's love for missions began as a teenager when he went on his first mission trip.

"I led my very first person to Christ on a mission trip," Fowler said. "Those experiences galvanized my love for missions, and since that first trip, I have participated in or led at least one mission trip each year. I cannot imagine living as a faithful Christian without active missions involvement."

The IMB is an entity of the Southern Baptist Convention responsible for training and sending missionaries to present the gospel of Jesus Christ and plant churches all over the world. The IMB currently supports more than 5,200 missionaries worldwide.

Fowler will most likely serve two terms on the IMB board, which will give Union University a significant presence there for 16 consecutive years.

"We're so happy to have Dr. Fowler on the IMB board to represent Union in this important way," Union University President David S. Dockery said.

"I am pleased that Dr. Charles Fowler has been elected to serve on the IMB board of trustees," said Jerry Rankin, IMB president. "Dr. John Adams has given excellent leadership during his tenure on the board. We are grateful for the partnership and support of Union University in our mission task and the opportunity to enhance that relationship through this continuing representation on our board." ❖

Union expects more winning basketball

Union University basketball will have a new look and a new radio home this season.

Men's and women's broadcasts can be heard on WTNE 97.7 FM, "The Patriot." The new arrangement should make it possible to tune in Bulldog basketball from most locations in West Tennessee. Internet broadcasts of Union games can be heard at www.gracebroadcasting.com/patriot.

Some key players were lost from last year's teams, but coaches are expecting strong contributions from a number of players who redshirted last year, as well as from incoming freshmen and transfers. Both programs are picked to be top contenders for national and conference honors again this season.

Lady Bulldogs 2005-06

The defending NAIA national champion Lady Bulldogs return seniors Ena Daniels, Tiffany Fisher, Jennifer Henson and Peggy McCain. Also coming back from last year's 35-5 squad are sophomores Merideth Richardson and Crystal Eason, both of whom started as freshmen. Daniels and Richardson made the NAIA All Tournament Team.

Coach Mark Campbell and staff will miss departed stars such as NAIA Tournament MVP Stephanie Clark and Tournament Hustle Award winner Monica Elliott. But Campbell says this team can build on last year's fantastic finish. He's excited about having experienced guards back this year who have been tested in high-pressure situations.

"A lot of the question marks lie with our post players," said Campbell, now in his seventh year as Lady Bulldogs coach. "As they get better, we get better."

Coaches say they'll get help on both sides of the court from several new players, like freshman Jessica Graves, junior transfer D. J. Sissoko, and redshirts Latorya Fuller and Josephine Owino.

The Lady Bulldogs again play one of the nation's toughest pre-conference schedules, including NAIA powers Southern Nazarene, Oklahoma Christian, Oklahoma Baptist, Lee and Berry (Ga.).

"I think it's really important for the girls to get a look at who we'll play in March (at the national tournament)," Campbell said. "We find our weaknesses when we play the best teams."

Union Bulldogs 2005-06

Union's men lost just two seniors from last season's 24-9 team that won the TranSouth Conference Championship and advanced to the NAIA National Tournament.

The TranSouth Athletic Conference men's basketball coaches have unanimously selected Union as the preseason favorite for the upcoming basketball season. Street & Smith's College Basketball magazine tabbed the Bulldogs as the NAIA's third-ranked team in the preseason.

Among those returning is the team's leading scorer, senior Corey Burkett (15.3 points per game), and juniors Marcus Cooper, Pierry Valmera and Ben Frederick. Matt Trammell and Roy Ross return to provide senior leadership.

Coach Ralph Turner and staff welcome transfers Mack Bealim, at guard, Kinley Sellers and Deywane Lee (both forwards). Each is expected to add athleticism to this year's lineup. Lee is the son of Keith Lee, the University of Memphis' all-time leading scorer and rebounder.

"By watching Deywane play, you can tell that he has been taught to play the game by some of the best," said head coach Ralph Turner. "He is long and athletic and relentless on the boards."

Turner, entering his 13th season as head coach, is also impressed with Bealim's potential.

"Mack was one of the best players in a very good junior college league in Alabama last season," Turner said. "He may be the most versatile player on our team this season because he can play anywhere from point guard to power forward."

Men's soccer works to help Bartos family

Titus Bartos ('05) grew up in Romania, a country in which sports fans love soccer.

Union men's soccer players love the game, too. But they were willing to take a break from the game to help the Bartos family during a time of tragedy.

After graduation in May, Bartos was to be married Aug. 13. Plans changed when his mother, Maria, died Aug. 10 from injuries sustained in an automobile accident near Lexington, Tenn.

Several August soccer practices were canceled so the team could work around the community in return for donations for the Bartos family. By doing yard work and other odd jobs around the Jackson community, the team raised nearly $2,000 for the family.

Michael Pugh, a sophomore soccer player at Union, helps remove weeds around a Jackson house.

"That's pretty exciting, because we didn't expect to raise anywhere near that," said sophomore soccer player Michael Pugh.

All the money went to help with travel costs. Bartos' five siblings weren't planning to make the trip for his wedding, but they decided to come to the United States for their mother's funeral, held Aug. 20 in Atlanta. Bartos and his wife, Laura, were married the following day.

Head coach Darin White said the team completed 33 projects and some donations were still coming in through the mail. "We actually did more work than I thought we could in one day," said White.

Pugh said the soccer team's efforts were a benefit for the school and the community, as well as within the soccer team itself. Many found the experience important in their own spiritual journeys.

"Not only did we use it as an outreach to help (Titus), but we used it as an outreach to help our own team," Pugh said. ♦

Women's soccer program shows strong promise

By David Roach '07

It was a daunting task: Build a women's soccer program without the benefit of a fall recruiting season.

Brandon Boylan was named the team's first coach in February and immediately went to work recruiting players for the team. Boylan found out quickly he was up against a tough challenge.

"When we started the recruiting process, for every five girls I talked to, three had already made up their minds where they were going," he said.

The recruiting process got off to such a slow start for Boylan, some privately considered the possibility of delaying women's soccer for another season. That would have been a big disappointment, since plans for the program have been in the works for three years.

"I was asked if I thought I could get the numbers together for a team. I said I thought I could, and God worked it out to get the team together," Boylan said.

Fortunately, Boylan was able to draw players from a club team already in place at Union. Between the club team and other recruits, all of whom participated in tryouts in the spring, 10 made the roster.

Senior defenseman Kerra Kunce, learning foundations major, was one of the current students who made the team.

"It was a huge honor to have made the soccer team. I haven't played soccer in four years, and that was on a guy's team," she said. "The level of play is so high in college, not to mention getting used to playing new positions. It really takes a whole season to adapt."

As might be expected, the first season

Stellar Soccer Facilities

When plans were announced for a new soccer field (see above photo) some people assumed the hardest work was finished when the tennis courts on site were demolished. But those who remained on campus after graduation got an education in how much work is required to build a soccer field. It was dubbed "Summer of the Dump Truck" at Union.

About 1,200 truckloads of fill dirt were deposited on campus – 20,000 cubic yards in all. Yet even after the flow of asphalt-buckling trucks abated, the work still was far from finished.

Workers installed a special blend of Bermuda grass called T-10 that is resistant to drought and cold. It also requires less mowing.

Matches were played on the new turf in mid-October. Phase two of the project is scheduled for next summer. It includes a concession stand, press box, restroom facilities and bleacher seating for 700 fans. ♣ brought more losses than victories, but the first match in the program's history was a 2-1 road victory over Clearwater (Fla.) Christian College. In late October, the team put together consecutive wins for the first time. Many of the losses were competitive matches.

Union University President David S. Dockery is among the fans who are pleased with the new team's progress.

"The competition in women's soccer is quite strong and our young women have already reached a level of respectability where they are quite competitive each game. We could not be more pleased with their efforts, and most of all for the way that they have represented the university on and off the field."

In mid-August, Boylan got to see the fruit of his labor together for the first time. At that moment, he knew he was starting something special.

"The first time we got together, I knew the quality of the players was there, it was just whether we would be a good team," he said.

Eight days later the team had a scrimmage against Freed Hardeman and actually scored the first goal of the match before falling 3-1. Despite the loss, the team gained confidence.

"That scrimmage was a huge boost for this team," Boylan said. "They played well and showed to themselves they can compete with these teams."

Six weeks later, in the regular season, Union played the same Freed Hardeman side to a 1-1 draw in double overtime.

The way the team has come together is especially satisfying to Boylan.

"I wouldn't trade these girls for the world," he said. "They will always have a special place in my heart and are setting a strong example for future teams to follow." ♣

10 of decade of transformational Leadership

Ten years ago, as David S. Dockery walked into a room at the Old English Inn for an interview with Union's presidential search committee, a thought struck him.

"I've been a part of Southern Baptist life in a pretty visible, active way for 15 years, and I think I know a lot of people across this convention," Dockery thought to himself. "And I don't know anybody in this room."

Dockery wasn't a Union graduate and he wasn't from West Tennessee. So in that sense, he was an outsider and figured his chances at becoming Union's president weren't good.

But that weekend Dockery enjoyed a warm and stimulating meeting with Union trustees, specifically Elzie Danley and John Drinnon.

"I had a sense from God that I had connected with them and they had connected with me," Dockery said.

The feeling was mutual, as Union trustees soon elected Dockery as the university's president. Now a decade later, Dockery is one of 27 percent of college presidents who serve 10 years at one school. He lists three achievements in particular for which he is the most grateful:

— Union is an institution that takes its Christian mission purposefully and seriously.

— The academic rigor across the campus has increased significantly.

"The serious efforts at scholarship are heartening for me and I think encouraging for most of the faculty," Dockery said.

— The look and development of the campus. Since Dockery's tenure began, Union has completed Jennings Hall, Hammons Hall, Miller Tower, new baseball and softball fields and renovations to campus housing. Currently under construction are White Hall, the Fesmire Field House and a new women's soccer field.

But in typical fashion, Dockery is quick to credit others for his successes at Union and for the length of his tenure.

At the top of his list is his family — his wife Lanese, and his sons Jon, Ben and Tim — who have also become an integral part of Union.

"It has been our lives," Lanese said about the Dockery's time at Union. "I have loved the students and the wonderful community of faculty and staff, as well as the tremendous learning experiences from the faculty and speakers who have come to be with us. The travel opportunities, getting to know great alumni and seeing students thrive once they leave this place really gives me joy."

Dockery also acknowledges the support of Union's board of trustees, the Union faculty and staff and other loyal people who come to work each day hoping to make a difference in Union University.

Finally, Dockery cites the support from local churches and the community, and the large number of people who pray for the university on a regular basis.

"Clearly it has been a time in God's good providence when he has chosen to smile on Union University, and I am indeed grateful for the privilege we have been given to serve in this place," Dockery said. ☩

The photos on the following pages are representative of some of President Dockery's favorite memories from his years of leadership over the past decade at Union University.

The Unionite also pays tribute to the many accomplishments of the Dockery administration with two timelines featuring institutional highlights and personal achievements from 1995 to present.

“David Dockery is a ‘level 5 leader’ as defined by Jim Collins in his book, Good to Great. Specifically, David has built enduring greatness at Union University ‘through a paradoxical blend of personal humility and professional will.’ He is ‘a study in duality: modest and willful, humble and fearless.’ David has taken Union University to new heights at all levels. It is one of the great stories in Christian higher education.”

Robert C. Andringa
President
Council for Christian Colleges and Universities

“Without a doubt, the greatest period of advancement for Union University has been under David Dockery’s leadership. During his tenure, the University has completed the most aggressive capital campaign in its history while sharpening its focus on excellent teaching and serious scholarship. Having observed his leadership for nearly a decade now, I can confirm that David Dockery is ‘the real deal.’”

Evans P. Whitaker
President
Anderson College
Anderson, S.C.

“For seven and a half years as president of Lambuth University I witnessed first hand the tremendous work of David Dockery at Union. By every measure Union has enjoyed unparalleled success under David Dockery’s leadership. Moreover, throughout his tenure at Union he has brought national acclaim to Union University. His leadership has been transformational.”

W. Ellis Arnold, III
President
Lambuth University 1997-2004

“From my perspective as an active member of the Jackson-Madison County community, David Dockery has truly made Union University an integral part of our community. He has worked to not only broaden the community financial support for the University, but also to have Union serve as outstanding academic, research and spiritual resources for this community.”

Vicki Lake
Director, Business Development
West Tennessee Healthcare

“It is hard to put into words the personal pleasure and satisfaction that comes from observing the life and ministry and contributions of David S. Dockery, this exceptionally gifted man who now for ten years has served as president of Union University. These have been years of remarkable growth in every single facet during times when challenges to maintain a solid Christian witness in higher education are almost beyond counting.”

President Emeritus
Annuity Board of the Southern Baptist Convention

“I can think of no other leader in Christian higher education who has done in ten years what David Dockery has done at Union University. What David has done as president of Union is bigger than Union - it's entered into the vanguard of the cause of Christ. Here we have a leader among leaders.”

“I have on many occasions praised David Dockery and held him up to Christian academic leaders—Catholic and Protestant alike—as a model university president. When it comes to the Christian mission in contemporary higher education, he knows what needs to be done and he knows how to do it. Indeed, he has done it at Union University. By all objective measures, David's tenure at Union has been splendidly successful.”

May 24, 2003: At Union's spring graduation, President Dockery celebrated with son Ben who was awarded a bachelor's degree in philosophy.

"Over the past decade of service with President David S. Dockery, certain special qualities of leadership have become evident to me. Dr. Dockery knows and models quality academics; wants to educate the head as well as the heart; puts first priority on people; has had the vision to elevate Union to national recognition; loves God and puts service above self; somehow combines all the above. Priceless!"

Thomas R. Rosebrough
Dean, College of Education and Human Studies
Union University

"Dr. Dockery blesses us with his gift of a clear vision of an even more perfect Union University. He then provides us abundant campus and community-wide opportunities to work with him to make that vision a reality. He moves among us as a highly talented thinker, communicator, visionary, motivator and implementer. In all of this, he stretches us and seeks to expand God's rule on earth."

Roland Porter
Associate Professor, School of Business
Union University

"In his 1996 inaugural address, Dr. Dockery called for Union to be a Great Commandment (Matt 22:36-40) university. Almost one decade later, during his FOCUS week dinner presentation to the 2005 incoming freshmen class and during his fall convocation address to the Union family, Dr. Dockery remained consistent in his call. I truly feel blessed to work under his leadership, and I consider it an honor to serve Union during his tenure."

Jacqueline Taylor
Assistant Dean of Students
Union University

"Dr. Dockery is a great scholar, a visionary leader, and a Christian statesman. Over the past decade, he has led Union University into a golden era of growth and influence. Thanks to his leadership, Union now stands in the front rank of Christian institutions – providing a model of Christian scholarship and intellectual engagement. By any measure, this has been an incredible decade for a great institution."

R. Albert Mohler Jr.
President
The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary

"An effective leader has the personal gifts to see a vision, the courage to risk himself to attempt to make it happen, and the ability to bring the best out of others and himself in the process thus assuring the best opportunity for success. To sustain these gifts one must have a deep awareness of Christ's presence in the world and a commitment to serve Him. This is David Dockery."

“For most students at the ‘run-of-the-mill’ university, the president is someone who sits in a big office, meets with the donors, and speaks a few times a year. Not so at Union University. Here, Dr. Dockery is as likely to be cheering on the Bulldogs at the Fred Delay gymnasium or giving wisdom to a senior about the best graduate schools to which to apply. When Dr. Dockery cast the vision for Union to be ‘People Focused,’ I am confident that he had the student body at the front of his mind.”

Kimberly Thornbury

*Dean of Students

“As we celebrate the 10th anniversary of Dr. Dockery’s election as president, we thank God for bringing him to guide our beloved Union. We thank God for the faithfulness of Dr. and Mrs. Dockery’s untiring leadership. I pray that this decade will mark the beginnings of many more years of their leadership at Union University.”

Phil Jett

“The exponential growth of Union University is evidence of Dr. Dockery’s exceptional leadership. As Dr. Dockery makes decisions about Union’s future, it is apparent that he realizes a successful learning community must be equally balanced in all academic areas. Through the implementation of Union 2010, Dr. Dockery continues to lead Union with an admirable intelligence and humble spirit.”

Karie Thomas

*President

“For the past decade, his opening convocation addresses have served as a road map to the soul for the university’s administration, students, and faculty. They speak of the retrieval of conviction, commitment, and community in the modern university from a distinctively Christian philosophy. To us, Dr. Dockery serves not only as 15th president of a great institution: he is a visionary, scholar and pastor.”

Gregory Alan Thornbury

*Associate Professor of Philosophy and Theology

“As a stakeholder in Union University, Class of 1975, I have witnessed a significant increase in my investment during president Dockery’s tenure. Under President Dockery’s leadership, the University has distinguished itself from its peers by consistently delivering a distinctive and unique product to its expanding customer base. Faith. Values. January 15, 2005: The Union community rejoiced with the Dockerys as son Jonathan Samuel ('02) married Sarah Elizabeth Phillips ('02).

"Dr. Dockery is a leader in a league all of his own; his vision for the University is unparalleled. Dr. Dockery has demonstrated that an institution of higher learning can be both Christ centered and academically superior without compromise. This commitment to a Christian worldview and educating students who can show forth the love of Christ is the mission of Christian higher education, and no one does it better than Dr. Dockery."

Lisa Rogers '83

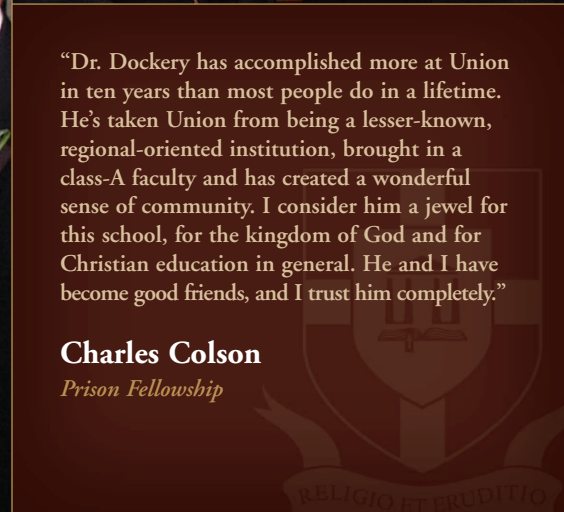

*OBI/GYN, Jackson
Board of Trustees
Union University*

"If one looked at the achievements of Union University over the past 10 years and claimed the university's enhancements had required 50 years, it could be said that the university's leadership had been far beyond superior. But, to realize how far Union has come in a mere decade is an astounding testimony to the fact that David Dockery must in fact lead by divine inspiration. Jackson is blessed beyond measure by what Union University is and is to be, and all of us who profess to be leaders ought to constantly seek his counsel."

Charles Farmer

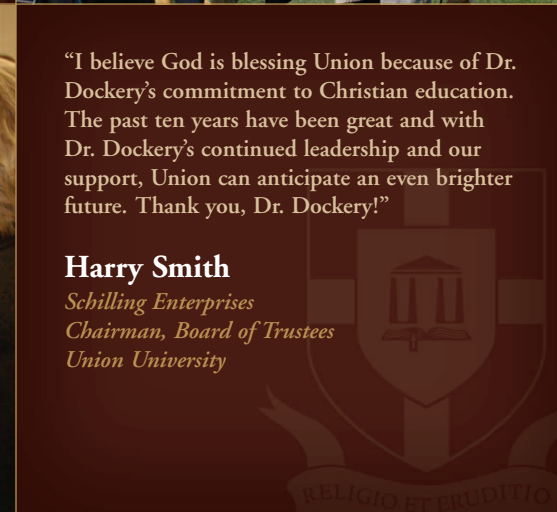

*Mayor
City of Jackson*

"Dr. Dockery has accomplished more at Union in ten years than most people do in a lifetime. He's taken Union from being a lesser-known, regional-oriented institution, brought in a class-A faculty and has created a wonderful sense of community. I consider him a jewel for this school, for the kingdom of God and for Christian education in general. He and I have become good friends, and I trust him completely."

Charles Colson

UNIVERSITY KICKS OFF CAPITAL CAMPAIGN

UNION 2010:
A VISION FOR EXCELLENCE

Union University has launched a $110 million capital campaign that will enhance campus facilities, endowment growth and operations support.

Entitled "Union 2010: A Vision for Excellence," the campaign builds on the achievements of the past decade and positions the university for a dramatic increase in its ability to serve students and the community for years to come.

President David S. Dockery announced the new capital campaign at Union's Ninth Annual Scholarship Banquet Sept. 27. He told the audience approximately $73 million of the $110 million goal already has been raised.

"It is impossible for future generations of Union students to receive the same excellence-driven, Christ-centered education now in place without the generosity of our friends," said David S. Dockery, Union University president. "This campaign articulates a bold statement for our continued growth."

Goals for the Vision for Excellence campaign include:

- $30 million for strategic needs on the campus, including the new White Hall science building, Fesmire Field House for athletics, a soccer complex, residence life improvements and expanded banquet facilities.
- $25 million for expanded endowment, which will allow the university to earn more income for student scholarships, academic chairs, academic programs and lectureships.

- $55 million is earmarked for ongoing support of day-to-day operations. The average student who pays full tuition actually contributes only about half of the actual cost for his or her education. The new money would help move Union forward in hiring top faculty, providing financial aid and maintaining an effective educational environment.

Prior to 1996, Union had never attempted a financial campaign in excess of $10 million, but in 1998 the university set a $35 million goal that was reached two years ahead of schedule. In 2000, Union launched the Building a Future campaign, seeking $60 million by 2005. That campaign raised $63 million and concluded one year ahead of schedule.

Those dollars represent many improvements that already have been made, including Jennings Hall, Hammons Hall, Miller Tower, new soccer, baseball and softball facilities, the Fesmire Field House and other investments. The goals of the campaign will build on the achievements of the past decade, and will position Union for a dramatic increase in its ability to serve future generations of students and the community.

"This campaign has been carefully planned to take Union University to another level of excellence and to build on the momentum established in the past 10 years," said Harry Smith, a Union trustee and member of the campaign leadership team.

"For this institution to continue to be recognized as one of the nation's top Christian universities, we must accomplish the goals set for this campaign and give generously."

More about specific goals in the campaign:

New and enhanced campus facilities

White Hall Science Building – Thanks to a generous lead gift from Dr. and Mrs. Roy L. White, the university is in the early stages of developing a 63,000 square foot, three story building on the west campus that will house Union's biology and chemistry departments, and the School of Nursing. Plans include state-of-the-art laboratories, suites reserved for student research and new classroom and office facilities.

Fesmire Field House – Longtime supporters Benny and Norma Fesmire have taken the lead step in providing quality facilities for Union University athletes through a new athletic field house, which will be located close to the baseball, softball and soccer complexes. It will be equipped with office and dressing facilities and an indoor practice center.

Soccer Complex – Work is now completed on a second soccer field in the area where Union's tennis courts had been located. The new complex will accommodate the addition of women's varsity soccer this fall. Plans also include stands and a press box between the two fields.

Residential Student Life/ Intramural Fields/Tennis Courts

– Growth of the student body in recent years calls for the expansion of the residential life complex. Union's popular intramural athletic program provides students with much-needed health and fitness benefits and a break from rigorous study schedules. To support this vital program, new lighted fields are planned, along with tennis courts to replace those that were removed to make room for the new soccer complex.

Banquet Facilities for Barefoot Student Union Building – Visitors to campus events will recognize the value of expanded and enhanced facilities which will allow events such as the Union Forum greater capacity, and give our growing student population much-needed space for meals and fellowship. The Aramark Company has furnished generous support in this area, but additional funding will be needed to expand the Coburn Dining Hall banquet facilities.

Expanded endowment

As the Vision for Excellence campaign begins, Union's endowment stands at almost $23 million. While that is a significant increase over the total of a decade ago, it is still far less than the endowment funds of many of Union's peer institutions – those with which Union competes for top faculty and students.

Why is endowment a critical component in the quest of educational excellence? Endowment funds offer the additional resources that can make the difference between competence and excellence. These funds are invested in perpetuity, and the income is used to provide vitally needed student scholarships, academic chairs, academic programs and lectureships.

An additional $25 million, coupled with investment earnings in the next five years, could raise Union's endowment past the $50 million level and help to ensure Union's future of excellence.

Support for operations

In addition to special funds for facilities and endowment, the University needs ongoing support for day-to-day operations. The average student who is paying full tuition is still paying less than half of the actual cost of his or her education; the rest must come from other sources, particularly annual gifts that help provide the margin of excellence.

The Vision for Excellence goal represents a significant increase in annual giving for operating support – an aggressive goal but one that will help Union move forward in hiring the best faculty, providing vital scholarships and financial aid for students, and maintaining an attractive and wholesome educational environment.

Future vision goals

In addition to the near-term capital needs identified previously, the Union 2010 plan identifies future expansion opportunities that will be needed by the year 2022 in order to achieve the Union vision. While these items are not included in the goals of the Vision for Excellence campaign, they are long-term goals which may be moved forward if funding becomes available.

Among these future goals in phase two of our work are:

Learning Center — A stand-alone library would house current collections, provide space for expansion, and allow greater access to technological information in an age that demands it quickly. Art Village — The art department would move to a location west of Jennings Hall, where several buildings would house offices, studios, and exhibition areas. Athletics and Convocation Center –

Construction of an arena potentially seating 4,000 for athletic contests and special events such as concerts, graduations, and the annual scholarship banquet. The event center could also serve the broader West Tennessee community by hosting conferences and other major events that draw visitors to our region. Addition to Jennings Hall — Although completed in 2001, this building is already operating at capacity. More classroom and office space is needed. A state-of-the-art performing arts center for musical and dramatic productions is a much-needed addition for our campus. Addition to White Hall — Phase two of White Hall could include additional classroom and office space for computer science, engineering, mathematics and physics departments. ❖

Union forges new partnerships in China

Any business, institution or individual with a global perspective cannot afford to overlook China. It already ranks as the third-largest trading partner of the United States, surpassing Japan and every other nation except Canada and Mexico.

Against that backdrop, Union University is forging new relationships in a nation where financial power and intellectual influence are expected to grow significantly in the next decades.

"China is trying very hard to become number one in the world in everything," says visiting engineering professor Ilyoul (Walter) Lee, who came to Union from Yanbian University of Science and Technology in Yanji, a city in northeastern China. "China is the manufacturing base for the world, but in the future, it will also be one of the largest markets in the world."

Yanbian and Union signed a partnership agreement in 2004. Lee says it's a timely alliance. Ties are forming so quickly with China that Americans are learning Chinese languages in record numbers.

"There is a Chinese proficiency test you can take in America," Lee said. "About 250,000 people take it every year."

Yanbian ranks among China's top 100 universities, and Lee says nearly all of its graduates go on to good jobs or graduate study. He says one reason for their success is a high rate of multilingualism. The school is located in Jilin province, very close to the North Korean and Russian borders. Many students who arrive are fluent in other languages, and some acquire new language skills during their studies.

Union faculty could play a role in bolstering English language studies at Yanbian. Discussions are underway that would send Union faculty to the campus to teach English as a Second Language course. A shared Master of Business Administration program between the two universities is also under consideration.

The highly rated engineering program at Yanbian already is becoming an important resource for Union students and faculty. Lee is teaching through May 2006, and additional visiting professors from Yanbian will follow.

Lee, a Korean-American, has graduate degrees from the University of Missouri and Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He was a church planter in New England, and a Southern Baptist missionary. At Union, he runs electrical engineering labs, and lectures on international teaching and learning methods, with a special emphasis on the integration of faith and learning.

Lee says he will explore teaching and ministry opportunities in the United States when his time at Union concludes. He hopes to see Union students do the same in China, because he says Americans with knowledge of Chinese language and culture are almost guaranteed a wide selection of employment and travel opportunities.

"We're working to get our students connected there," says Cynthia Jayne, Union's associate provost for international and intercultural studies. "In every discipline, we need students from Union looking at China."

Three Union students have taken Study Abroad courses in China recently. Rachele Haskins studied at Inner Mongolian University in spring 2004. Christina Schulz and Allysha Martin studied at Yanbian earlier this year.

Four Union faculty members took part in the English Language Institute in 2002, and three others were involved in a Consortium for Global Education/Nursing Department Site Visit in 2003.

In addition to the association with Yanbian, Union will be among the most active participants at a higher education conference hosted by Qingdao University in June 2006. The CGE-sponsored event will include discussions on the potential of private universities in China. ☼

Ronald and Jan Boud Jackson, Tenn.

For Ron and Jan Boud, investing in Union University goes beyond monetary giving. They make their investment in Union on the front line.

"I see students everyday," says Boud, professor of music at Union. "I see their quality, I see the validity of their Christian calling and their beliefs mirror my own beliefs. So, you could say, this for me is sending my money on ahead."

Jan supports the front line calling to teach and their personal investment by opening their home to students.

"We've been in teaching for a long time," says Jan. "We've always wanted our home to be an open home for kids to come on weekends and hang out or get away a bit."

The couple finds joy in preparing students for their callings and ministries, whether they have gone on to high profile careers or are quietly helping those in needy places.

"I've seen students who have gone to the highest level of government—the White House and in very invisible places, as well," says Boud. "Places that are not hungry for publicity—places in which to help needy people. I consider it a privilege to have taught so many, many students."

Knowing that investing in students provides a lifetime of benefits multiplied again and again, the Bouds encourage all Union friends to give.

"Union is a school unswerving in its mission and a place dedicated to helping young people become what God wants them to be," says Jan.

"A person can invest money," adds Ron, "and some can invest energy and life and time in Union University. We see results in changed lives, maturing students and a hungering after God and knowledge. Why delay that joy?"

Faculty appreciation

They are friendly, approachable people. Professors are always there and really do have an open door policy. I love the one-on-one attention we get from professors. "I appreciate that the standards are set high. It is something to build up to and try to maintain. It will definitely help when I leave Union. "I think Dr. Dockery looks for the best to teach the students. It's a good thing because their knowledge will empower us to help our generation succeed in employment, in service and in our world."

Curtis and Joan Mansfield Jackson, Tenn.

Union University's Lady Bulldogs attracted the attention of Curtis and Joan Mansfield. They began following the team in the 1980s and have been faithful fans since.

"We became Booster members," says Mansfield, president of Jackson's FirstBank. "We were very involved with Coach David Blackstock in working with the NAIA Tournaments."

The relationship with Union extends beyond basketball. Son Lance Porter is a 1995 graduate of Union, and Mansfield serves on the Union University board of regents.

"We are so fortunate to have a university such as Union in Jackson. God has divinely led us to acquire the excellence of leadership we have in President Dockery."

Whether it's on the courts or in the classroom, Mansfield says Union is gaining recognition. He praises the high academic standards grounded in Christ-centered learning for this reputation.

"Union has an outstanding scholastic program," says Mansfield. "Their chemistry and biology departments are second to none in the state of Tennessee. The business and nursing programs have earned high recognition throughout other states. And one of the most important things about Union is the fact that they are Christ-centered."

It's this influence of faith and learning on the lives of our future leaders that Mansfield says should lead Union supporters to see the importance of giving.

"It is important to continue to educate our children in a facility that offers high standards, not only in education, but to surround them in Christian fellowship. Funding for these causes produces excellent leaders, first class citizens and a community and world that we can all take pride in."

John Crawford

*Major: History

A lover of history

John Crawford has always loved history. He was especially fascinated by the events of World War II, and he read books on the subject throughout high school. He just wasn't sure that interest could support a career – until he came to Union. Now he's confident he can complete graduate study and perhaps teach history in a college classroom one day. Crawford says Union's approach to integrated faith and learning allows him to put world events in better perspective. "Seeing God's hand in history gives you comfort that He's in control," says Crawford. "And you see He's in control of what might happen in the future." The junior from Jackson is a Dean's Scholar, and says he's grateful for financial support that often comes anonymously. "I've seen how this money works in the lives of students, and I'm very grateful," Crawford says. "Although it's a college, that money is also being used to further a ministry. Graduates of Union spread the gospel message, no matter what field they enter." Matthew Crawford, John's brother, graduated from Union in May and is now studying at The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky. Like John, Matthew is preparing for a career in Christian higher education. Would John like to be a part of Union's faculty one day? "I certainly hope that could be a possibility someday. I'd love it."

Major: Christian Ethics and Christian Studies, respectively
 Year: Seniors Hometown: Columbia, Tenn.

Preparing to serve together

It's exciting to prepare for our calling here. We are both passionate about the same things, and in particular, Christian ethics. As a married couple we can dialogue at home about topics in the classroom.

"Being married and full-time students keeps our lives full. But, Union's strong emphasis on community provides a really good support system during our first year of marriage. We are finding an extensive network of faculty and friends who are committed to Union's purpose and the building of a strong Christian community. These relationships encourage us in our education and faith.

"We feel that Union University prepares students to positively impact society as well as excel in the work place. The worldview taught here from the framework of Scriptures molds us into people who can advance the common good and excel on many levels."

Enrollment student ambassador

This is my first semester as an ambassador. It has been a really good experience. I've grown in learning how to relate to people. I love sharing the Union story and telling how great a place it is. It's given me an inside look at the university which makes me appreciate even more deeply what the school provides for us. "I find that Preview Days give just what a prospective student needs to make a decision about coming to Union. The whole day is tailored to each individual's need and the clincher for most is their personal contact with student life here at Union. They see students worship together. They see students hustling and chatting through the hallways. They sit in on a class and see professors and students interact. They can begin to envision themselves as a functioning part of Union's community. "That's what counts: potential students finding out that they too, can be a part of the great things going on at Union University."

Chad Wilson ('01)

Certified financial planner Foundation Bank, Jackson, Tenn.

Chad Wilson grew up a Baptist in a banking family in Paris, Tenn. The last thing he wanted to do was come to Union University and prepare for the banking profession.

Instead Wilson decided to look at universities like UT-Knoxville, Sewanee and Vanderbilt, and explore majors other than business.

"I didn't want to come to Union. It was a little too close to home," said Wilson. "And, I wanted to run so far from banking that I got a degree in music education."

But life has come full circle for Wilson. Today, he is a loyal Union alum who majored in music and minored in finance. He works as a certified financial planner for Foundation Bank, a division of his father's bank. He says he now understands his calling in life.

"Probably what I'm most thankful to Union for is giving me a framework within which to live and worship and work," said Wilson. "Union gave me a blueprint for life, to see everything through the lens of Christianity and how we're not compartmentalized in the way we live life. It's one continuum and who we are affects every area of life."

"That's why I give to Union. I believe in that dream, I believe in that vision of equipping students with tools to impact whatever corner of the world they go to. And I want to support that dream with my voice, my time and my money."

When Liz Clark ('08) filled out her application for admission to Union University, she found the space allocated for one of her answers entirely inadequate.

The question: Please indicate any of your relatives who have been associated with Union University.

Clark attached a sheet to the application listing 21 family members with Union ties. They included maternal and paternal grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins.

It started in the 1960s with Paul B. Clark, Sr., Liz's grandfather, who pastored Jackson's Calvary Baptist church for 24 years. Clark, his wife Doris, and their children became involved in Union activities at the east Jackson campus, which was located near the former Calvary church building. It wasn't long before the family started getting to know students.

"I was in eighth grade and Dad and I started going to basketball games on the old campus," says Paul Clark, Jr., worship and music specialist with the Tennessee Baptist Convention. "It was so exciting. We also got involved with Union students at church, some serving as ministry interns. We had a lot of connection."

Clark served as a trustee at the time the Union campus was moved to north Jackson. He received an honorary doctorate from Union in 1987.

Their daughter Teresa graduated from Union in 1972. She was followed by son Paul, Jr. in 1975, son Ricky in 1979 and daughter Malesa in 1988. Most married Union alumni.

The legacy continues as third generation Clark family members receive their educations at Union. Many study music. Paul Clark, Jr., and his children enjoy music ministry. One son is a high school band director and his daughter Liz is a music major. Clark has fond memories of being in Union University Singers, conducted by the late Dr. Kenneth Hartley, former Union music professor.

"Dr. Hartley was a strong influence on me and other members of my family," Paul Clark, Jr. says of the former music department chairman. "At present, I'm very excited about Dr. Joiner's leadership. He has brought with him that same kind of relational sense that makes Union strong and allows students to make good music."

"Union has been a great influence on our family, and continues to be an influence on me," says Ricky Clark, minister of music at West Jackson Baptist Church. "It was also a wonderful connection point in the years I was away from West Tennessee."

Ricky Clark says the majority of his 85-member choir has a connection to Union, either as a graduate, student or employee. Dr. Joseph Blass, who retired last year from the Union music faculty after 45 years of service, is a West Jackson member. Now he serves with Ricky, singing in the choir at times and directing an ensemble.

"He was a great influence on my ministry. It's encouraging and humbling to now serve alongside him at West Jackson."

The Clarks' strong bond with Union endures with roots in the past and rises with hopes on Union's future.

"I love the direction it has gone in terms of clarity of the Christian world view," says Paul Clark, Jr. "The glory of Union is its heritage. While we are progressing, and it is a wonderful progression, I think it's important to keep healthy traditions, and at the same time continue to recognize our opportunities to impact the world." ❖
